THE WEEK IN SOCIETY.

With the opening of the grand opera at the Metropolitan Opera House and the various social incidents of last week, the season of fashionable gay life may be said to be well launched. The scene at the Opera House on Monday night was pleasant indeed, and viewed from the orchestra or the balcony the house was fresh and brilliant to a degree. From a society point of view nothing was eft to be desired. Every box was filled, and there was a lavish display of jewels and handsome gowns, it being the first general gathering of people society in full evening attire since last spring Mrs. Astor was quite regal in black velvet and si ver, with a stomacher of diamonds, and some hand-some jewels in her confure. While her beautiful daughter-in-law, Mrs. John Jacob Astor, was fair to gaze upon in a gown of white satin, made with being ornamented with some superb jewels. Mrs. Lloyd Brice's blond beauty was shown off to excellent advantage in a gown of pale lemoncolored satin and lace. Her jewels were diamonds, meralds and pearls. Beside her in the box sat Mrs. Henry Sloane, who seemed ablaze with dia-Her necklace of solitaires nearly rivalled n was in a gown of black velvet or moire, he front of the corsage covered with a net-york of diamonds. Mrs. Nellson's daughter, who will be formally presented to the fash onable world at a reception early in Decemer, was with her mother, dressed in a simple gow and pink silk. On Wednesday night, when Mme. Calve's singing and acting as Carmen in Bizet's opera called forth well-deserved enthusiasm, there was another brilliant audience in the boxes and in the orchestra stalls, and even in the upper alconies of the house; and again on Friday night, when Mme. Nordica and Jean and Edouard de Reszke appeared in "Lohengrin," there was another fine audience, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, in a gown of pale blue satin, trimmed with lace and silver spangles, and Mrs. William Jay, wearing a gown of white moire, the corsage trimmed with lace and white roses, with William A. Duer, Oliver H. P. Belmont and Colonel Jay, occupied one of the

An incident of the week in town was the revel given by the original Society of Colonial Dames of America on Thursday and Friday evenings, in the assembly-room and concert hall of the Madison isted of a reception, sale and vaudeville perform ance on Thursday evening and of a number of hisorical tableaus and a dance on Friday evening, was liberally patronized not only by society folk, but by many patriotic people who desired to contribute toward the fund which is being raised, through the efforts of that ever patriotic lady, Mrs. John King Van Rensselaer, for the preservation of Fort Crailo, at Greenbush, N. Y. The tableaus were most successfully presented and a handsome sum wa

The hunting sets of Westchester and Hempstead joined forces on Tuesday evening and gave a dance in the new Garden City Hall, at Garden City. The dance was preceded by a dinner, which was a most jolly affair. James L. Breese, with Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewlit as a partner, began the cotillon shortly before 9 o'clock. The favors were inexpensive trifles.

The weddings of the week, which were many, have been fully described in these columns. With Yew exceptions they were celebrated in churches, and each was followed by a large reception.

HENRY J. CARR EXPIRES IN THE SOUTH FERRY

WAITING-ROOM. Henry J. Carr. sixty years old, of No. 143 Berkeley Place, Brooklyn, died last night in the waiting room of the South Ferry, at Whitehall-st. His body was removed to the Old Silp police station.

Mr. Carr was a real estate broker at No. 176 Broadway, and was a member of the Real Estate Exchange. He formerly had an office at No. 628

Broadway, and was a member of the Real Estate Exchange. He formerly had an office at No. 623
Columbus-ave.

Late last night Mr. Carr's son, Dr. W. L. Carr, a Brooklyn physician, called at the station and identified the body. He said that his father had suffered for some years from heart trouble and probably died from heart failure.

No valuables were found on the body and only 47 cents in money. Dr. Carr expressed considerable surprise, as he said that his father usually carried a valuable watch and considerable money with him.
Pollecman James J. Healey, who was called in on the case, said that he saw no watch. Later the body was removed to an undertaker's shop.

THE FIRST WEEK OF OPERA. Tri-lingual opera at the Metropolitan Opera House has made a notable beginning, but, we fancy, its whole value and significance will not be seen until the French and Italian performances which have been heard this week are supplemented by the German representation of "Tristan und Isolde" on Wednesday next. There will be nothing perfunctory Wednesday next. There will be nothing perfunctory in that representation, so far, at least, as five of the performers are concerned. Mme. Nordica, Miss Brema and the De Reszke brothers are wrapped up heart and soul in the work, and, like a true apostle of Wagner, Mr. Seldl is looking forward to the representation as to the consummation of the de-sire of years. Not that we have not heard the work before in New-York. The memory of the representations in which Lehmann, Niemann, Brandt and Fischer took part are still an intellectual refreshment and delight, and it can never be forgotten that through their efforts, aided by Mr. Seidl's, the drama, in the season of 1886-87, was the most popular in the Metropolitan list, as indicated by the attendance. But we have never yet heard the lyric side of Wagner's work brought forward in all the parts. Mme. Lehmann could and did sing Isolde's music, but none of the German tenors who have lute melody of the part of Tristan. That has been reserved for M. Jean de Reszke, and if there is a new revelation of the possibilities which Wagner's music holds out to those who love singing for its own sake the credit will doubtless belong to this fine artist, whose ideals are always high and whose performances grow in dignity and beauty with the occasions that call them forth.

occasions that call them forth.

As for the week that is past, there can be no question that its interest centred chiefly in the reappearance of Mme. Calvé on Wednesday evening and yesterday afternoon in "Carmen." It would be an idle task to ettempt to create a more enthustastic admiration for this wonderful artist than aiready exists here. So far as her work in this opera is concerned, the reviewer's duty is done when he records the fact of her performance and its reception by the audience. Yet it is a unique pleasure each time to proclaim anew how matchless are her gifts, how wonderful the charm which goes out from her radiant personality. Yesterday she sang as well as she did on Wednesday (it would be hard to understand how anybody could sing better) and acted with even greater intensity and power. The audience, too, was more responsive, and the chariness and reserve, which were not quite dissipated on Wednesday until the end of the opera, were blown to the winds at the outset yesterday. The singers in the opera were the same except that Marie Engle took the place of Mme. Saville as Michaela. Miss Engle is a New-York woman, and her friends in the audience were numerous and encouraging. She made an agreeable impression, but her voice is so light that it is to feared that she will find but a limited field of usefulness in the season.

her voice is so light that it is to feared that she will find but a limited field of usefulness in the season.

The first of the series of Saturday night performances at the Metropolitan Opera House was given last evening. In deference to the taste which is supposed to belong to Saturday night audiences in these days exclusively, the opera presented was Verdi's "La Traviata." It was heard by a large assemblage that gave frequent and demonstrative signs of their pleasure in the performance. Mme. Frances Saville took the part of the heroine. Her impersonation went far to confirm the favorable impression gained from her appearances earlier in the week, not only of her quality as a singer, but also—and the statement made in connection with such a work as "La Traviata" has an especial significance—of her abilities in giving dramatic expression and vitality to her work. She sang the music flexibly, frequently with brilliancy and with an especial beauty in the passages lying in the upper part of her voice. She still showed, however, an unpleasant tendency at times to vocal unsteadiness and to deviation from the pitch. Mme. Saville's first week at the Metropolitan Opera House, with three performances to the company; and from her admirable equipment in voice and acting some interesting results will be looked for in the course of the season.

Signor Russitano made his first appearance this season in the part of Alfredo, which he sang with searnestness, if not with much distinction. Signor Annona did not appear to especial advantage as Giorglo. The other members of the cast were Mile. Hauermeister. Mme. Van Cauteren and Signort Vannit, Vivianit, Rinaidini and de Vaschetti, who cooperated in a performance that at least offered nothing to offend and was satisfactory in its emoothness.

CONCERT OF THE ORATORIO SOCIETY It would be doing a poor service to choral music were one to praise the first concert for this season of the Oratorio Society, which took place in Carne-gle Hail last night. There were but few moments which gave unalloyed pleasure, and these were no provided by either the choir or the orchestra, but by the solo singers. Of these, Miss Lillian Blauvelt deserved the most praise, though both Mr. Rieger and Mr. Meyn acquitted themselves admirably. Mrs Vanderveer Green, who was the solo contraito on Friday afternoon at the public rehearsal, yielded the place because of illness to Miss Marguerite Hall, who had an exceedingly thankless task and performed it poorly. The works performed were Han-del's "L'Allegro ed il Pensieroso," with two numbers of the nine which make the third part of that sec lar oraterio, called "Il Moderato," and Dvorak's Gardiner, Bradish Johnson, and Orme Wilson.

Preparations are already under way for the annual junior ball of Columbia College, which will be held in the Liberty Hall, as in former years, on the Friday before Christmas, December 20. Efforts are being made to make the ball this year even more successful than ever. The committee of management consists of Putnam Asbury Bates, chairman; William Arthur Bostwick, secretary and treasurer; J. Day Knap, Frank Fletcher Palmer, Munson Morris, from the School of Mines, and Ellery Oswell Anderson, William God'ey Loew, Burdette Kellogg Marvin, John Hill Prentice and Reginald William Pressprich, from the School of Arts, Miss Dumond, of No. 66 West Fifty-first-st., gave a luncheon on Tuesday last. Her guests included Mrs. Edwin Gould, Miss Alta Rockefeller, Mrs. Louis Sayre Kerr, Miss Coddington, Miss Hays, Miss Grace, Miss Chapin and the Misses Falconer. The Ladies' Auxiliary Society of the New-York Throat and Nose Hospital is making unusual efforts this year for the success of its fair, which is to be this year for the success of its fair, which is to be the days as usual, at Sherrys' on December 3 and 4. LOST ON ROMER SHOALS.

A FISHING SCHOONER WRECKED-HER CREW

LANDED IN SAFETY. The little fishing smack Cornella M. Kingsland nailing from Greenport, N. Y., was lost early yester day morning on Romer Shoals, but all hands succeeded in getting safely ashore in their own boats The Kingsland was returning from a successful fish-ing trip and had aboard about 2,500 codfish, which ing trip and had aboard about 2,300 codfish, which were in the hold. She was in command of Captain Matland, and carried a crew of nine men all told. Just how the vessel went on the rocks is not known, but a heavy tide was running and the Kingsland could not keep enough headway to keep clear. When she struck she filled at once and sank almost immediately. The crew succeeded in saving the mainsail, the jib and jib topsail, and then escaped to the dorles. Wrecking tugs went out to the wreck, but soon saw that the vessel would prove a total loss. The tug W. E. Chapman brought the captain and crew to the city.

The Kingsland was built in Greenport, N. Y., in 1850, and was 55 feet long, 17 feet beam, 7.7 feet deep and 29 gross tons register. She was valued at $2.06 and her cargo at $700, and both were owned by ton Market

DUNRAVEN'S CARDIFF SPEECH.

SHOULD NOT CHARGE WHAT HE CANNOT PROVE.

From The Boston Globe, Lord Dunraven says it is too late now to pro-his charges. It was too late to make them, the WILD AS WELL AS WEARISOME. From The Boston Herald.

From The Boston Heraid.

How dull of Dunraven not to be able to comprehend that he has accused Mr. Iselin of fraud when he has alleged that there was fraud in the measurement of the Defender! Isn't he sportsmar enough to know that the owner of a boat is responsible for her conduct in a race? Dunraven is getting wild as well as wearlsome.

HIS IDEA OF SPORTSMANSHIP. From The New-York Mall and Express.

From The New-York Mail and Express.

The Dunraven idea of sportsmanship is to makcharges against his rivals which he knows it is actually impossible either to prove or disprove.

But that idea is neither English nor American, not is it sportsmanlike or gentlemanly. It is the contemptible artifice of a beaten and humiliated contestant, who, being unable to take an honorable defeat in manly fashion, invents a subterfuge to ease him down from the lofty height to which his conceited ambition had carried him.

A MODERN CARDIFF GIANT. From The Syracuse Post.

From The Syracuse Post.

Dunraven is the modern Cardiff giant, with the slight exception that he is of flesh and blood. He was dug up, with the antique odor of ancestry clinging to him, and sent to America, a huge Philistine, with a reputation as a yachtsman full seven cubits long. He was outsailed, defeated and proved to be a sham giant. What we at first took to he the polish of good breeding, was but a coat of sheliac, long since worn off. His reputation for sportsmanship is cracked. Even the decency of common civility is failen away from him. But the Cardiff folk have not yet stopped crowding into the tent.

DESCRIBED IN HIS OWN WORDS. From The Philadelphia Ledger.

From The Pailadelphia Ledger.

What does Dunraven want now? While he sticks to his assertion that the Defender was handled fraudulently, in a manner which indicates that he believes it to be a fact, he now says the time for proof is past, and, moreover, "the New-York Yacht Club is hardly the right tribunal to make the inquiry." Then what is? Dunraven does not say. He talks like an honest man who has been deeply injured, and acts like a trickster who would rather siander his opponent than confess defeat. Perhaps the best solution of his peculiar language and conduct is to be found in his own words, as spoken at the Cardiff dinner; "The delusion that somebody is bent on insulting and persecuting you is one of the most hopeless and incurable forms of mild in-sanity." OBITUARY. M. F. H. DE HAAS.

PROTHINGHAM-On Friday, November 22. Charles was taken, developed into a heart affection which was the direct cause of his death, which occurred somewhat suddenly. Mr. De Haas was born in Rotterdam, Holland, on December 12, 1832. He studied in his native city and at The Hague, and also pursued a course of studies in London during the year 1851, where he devoted himself to water colors. His sketches of scenes on the English and Dutch coast at this period attracted so much attention that in 1857, at the age of twenty five, he was appointed artist to the Dutch Navy. The best known of the works he produced at this stage of his career are "The Storm Off the Isle of Jersey" and "After the Wreck." In 1859, chiefly through the persuasion of the late August Belmoni, who was a great admirer of the young artist's pictures, he came to New-York. He quickly won a high reputation here, and four years later he was elected an associate of the National Academy. In 1867 he was made an academican, and was one of the original members of the American Society of Painters in Water Colors, Mr. De Haas lived at No. 148 Taylor-st., Brooklyn, for nearly a quarter of a century, but six months ago he removed to West Ninthst., and occupied a studio in the Studio Building, No. 51 West Tenth-st. He was twice married, his second wife, to whom he was wedded only last spring, being Miss Alice Preble Tucker, a sister of the well-known lawyer and member of the Executive Committee of the Good Government Clubs in the recent campaign. His widow survives him, together with three adult children. His only son, M. F. H. De Haas, fr., was a pupil of his father and has aiready gained some reputation as an artist.

Mr. De Haas's forte was pre-eminently that of a marine painter, and among the best known of his The best known of the works he produced at thi children. His only son, M. F. H. De Haas, Ir., was a pupil of his father and has aiready gained some reputation as an artist.

Mr. De Haas's forte was pre-eminently that of a marine painter, and among the best known of his pictures are "Farragut's Fleet Passing the Forts. Below New-Orleans." Deserting the Burning Ship." "Off the Coast of France." "Sunset at Sea., "The Breaking Up of a Storm at Star Island, "The Breaking Up of a Storm at Star Island," "The Breach at West Hampton." "Early Morning off the Coast," "White Island Lighthouse." "Drifted Ashore in a Fog." "Long Island Sound by Moonlight." "The Shipwreck." "Moonrise and Sunset, "Dundle Cove, Isle of Wight," "Sunset at Cape Ann," "A Marine View, Scarborough," and "The Hapids Above Niagara.

For the last few years he had been busy in forming a collection of pictures, the sale of which was set for next January. He had completed about 190 paintings for this purpose, and his last work, called "Boone Island Light" and judged to be one of his best efforts, was finished only on the very day he was taken with the first symptoms of his illness. "The funeral will take place on Tuesday morning next at 10 o'clock at the Academy of Design, and will be attended by a large gathering of artists. The Rev. Dr. W. S. Rainsford will officiate.

MISS GEORGIA CHISHOLM

The sad news of the death of Miss Georgia Chis holm, who passed away on November 16, at No. 2 East Fifteenth-st., has fallen like a blight on a large circle of friends. The depth of tenderness that made her the comfort of her widowed mother and the unselfish and loving temper that had endeared her to so many young friends will keep her memory ever a joy to those who knew her.

The body was removed to Savannah, Ga., Miss Chisholm's birthplace, for burial.

CAPTAIN ROBERT HUTTON.

TERRY-On Saturday, November 23, Jane A., widow of Rev. David Terry. Funeral services will be held at the residence of her son-in-law, E. M. F. Miller, 797 Lexington-ave., on Tuesday morning, November 26, at 10 o'clock. A cable dispatch yesterday from Glasgow to Lauence Hutton, of this city, announced the death in Scotland of his uncle, Captain Robert Hutton, formerly of New-York. Mention was made on Sunday November 17, of the family of Andrew Hutton, of this city, which is now almost extinct. This dispatch tells of the death of his last surviving brother. Captells of the death of his last surviving brother. Captain Hutton was born at St. Andrews, Scotland, about eighty years ago, and like many of the boys of the rocky coast of Fife he took to the sea for a livelinood and went before the mast at an early age. He was captain of the brig British Queen before he had attained the age of thirty. The brig was then running from Dundee to New-York. He retired from the sea in 1850. He lived at South Norwaik. Conn., after his marriage, and removing from there to Yonkers had his home on the banks of the Hudson, in Warburton-ave, for several years, when he, with his daughter, Margaret, now Mrs. Dawson, went to Scotland to spend the rest of his days. He was well known among old New-Yorkers, was a thorough sallorman of happy and genial disposition.

JESSE K. FURLONG. Jesse K. Furlong, of No. 91 St. Felix-st., Brooklyn, died suddenly from apoplexy on Friday evening. He ate a hearty dinner at 7 o'clock, but complained of no illness until shortly before 11 o'clock, when he' A LIFE-SIZE PORTRAIT OF DANIEL WEBSTER died. He was born in New-York City on May 23. 18.4, and received academic and law education at Mount Washington College, which was then situ-ated near Washington Square, but which many years ago closed its doors. He was the valedictotian of his class. He was admitted to the har by Ogden Hoffman, and opened an office immediately rian of his class. He was admitted to the tax by Ogden Hoffman, and opened an office immediately afterward. For thirty years, until the time of his death, his office was at No. 233 Broadway, New-York. He attained distinction as a fury lawyer, and had a wide reputation in his profession as one of the strongest pleaders of his day. He was once a member of St. Nicholas Lodge of Masons in Now-York, which has been disbanded.

Mr. Furlong devoted all his spare moments to the collecting of historical statistics and data. He was especially interested in postage stamps and autographs, and collected each in large numbers. Among his autographs was one of Washington's, written on a Revolutionary battlefield, and others of Napoleon and Wellington. Although he refused to keep any autographs except those of the most illustrious men, in their own lines of work, he gathered together over five hundred signatures, chiefly by corresponding with the descendants of the famous men. He had a retentive memory, which enabled him to give without a moment's thought names of historical characters and dates of events both in this and foreign countries. When he died he had partially completed a list of all the officers who he'd the rank of bligadier-general and higher positions in the Colonial, Revolutionary and 1812 wars.

He also had a number of scrapbooks in which he had preserved data of all kinds relating to American statesmen and men of letters. He had a library of over 1,209 volumes containing books on all topics.
